FOREWORD

Being the first government full-time teacher training institution established in Hong Kong in 1939, Northcote College of Education has reached its fiftieth anniversary in 1989. The Golden Jubilee Exhibition and Open Day is one of a series of activities designed to commemorate this memorable occasion.

The theme for the Exhibition is the development of the College in the past 50 years, highlighting some of the contributions of the College in teacher education in the last five decades. In sharing with visitors to the Exhibition glimpses of our proud past and a review of the present, we hope to encourage our present staff and students to equal if not to surpass the efforts and achievements of our predecessors.

Mrs. I. Chiu So Lai-chun
Principal, N.C.E.

Address by the Director of Education
Mr. LI Yuet-ting, J.P. at the Opening Ceremony
of the Golden Jubilee Exhibition and Open Day of Northcote College of Education on Thursday, 6th July, 1989

Sir David, Distinguished Guests, Ladies and Gentlemen,

I extend to you all a warm welcome to the Opening Ceremony of the Golden Jubilee Exhibition and Open Day of Northcote College of Education. The Education Department, and in particular the College, is greatly honoured by the presence of Sir David Ford today to officiate at this Opening Ceremony.

1989 marks the fiftieth anniversary of Northcote College of Education, which was founded in 1939 as the first full-time teacher training institution in Hong Kong. Known before 1967 as Northcote Training College, it had very humble beginnings and opened in temporary premises in Hospital Road, with only three lecturers and 24 students in each of the English and Chinese Sections. In 1940, the construction of its building at Bonham Road was completed and the College was formally opened by the Governor, Sir Geoffrey Northcote, in November of that year. The Bonham Road building survived the Second World War and the College reopened in March 1946, in spite of great difficulties. In order to meet the demand for more trained teachers for the rapidly increasing school population, the College expanded greatly and in April 1962, it moved yet again to the present premises at Sassoon Road, which were opened by Sir Robert Black, the then Governor of Hong Kong.

The Bonham Road building was subsequently used for several years by the United College of the Chinese University of Hong Kong, but after considerable renovation reverted to College use in 1973. Since then the College has been operating its courses at both the Sassoon Road and the Bonham Road premises. A model of the Bonham Road building is on display in the College Hall today. To highlight the contributions and achievements of NCE in teacher education, the College has chosen the theme for the Golden Jubilee Exhibition to be the development of NCE in the past fifty years. A pamphlet on the "History of NCE" (羅維師五十年) will be distributed to visitors to the Exhibition.

Over the past fifty years, the College has produced over 8500 qualified teachers in its full-time courses and over 5500 qualified teachers in its part-time courses. NCE has therefore played a very significant role in teacher education in Hong Kong.

It is now my honour to invite Sir David Ford, the Chief Secretary, to address the gathering and to unveil the plaque commemorating the Golden Jubilee of Northcote College of Education.
